

'THREE FORESHORES'

Combining three separate walk sectors into one stunning, continuous Harbour-side trail, this 11-kilometre walk follows the curves of Sydney Harbour's foreshore from Mrs Macquarie's Chair to Federal Park in Glebe, giving access to parts of the City locked away from the public for two centuries. The walk takes in the City's maritime and social history by combining the City, Barangaroo and Glebe Foreshore walks into one spectacular trail.

'THREE FORESHORES' ITINERARY

Our day begins when the group meets at the northern end of the Grand Concourse, Central Station. At 9am we set off to walk via Hyde Park, along historic Macquarie Street and in to The Domain until we come to Andrew (Boy) Charlton Pool where we stop for morning tea.

Afterwards we continue along to Mrs Macquarie's Chair where we join the City Foreshore trail through the Sydney Botanic Gardens, past the Opera House and Circular Quay and through the Walsh Bay Arts precinct. We then join the Barangaroo Foreshore Walk, which continues all the way around Darling Harbour. Today's lunch will be in the Jones Bay Wharf precinct of Pyrmont where the heritage architecture and harbour views make for a stunning setting.

After lunch, we continue along the Glebe Foreshore Walk. The foreshore parks – Jubilee, Federal, Blackwattle Bay and Bicentennial – are the result of nearly 4 decades of campaigns for public access to the foreshore by local residents and the Glebe Society. Blackwattle Bay Park provides a great opportunity to see three iconic Sydney bridges in one beautiful view: Anzac Bridge (1996), Glebe Island Bridge (1903) and Sydney Harbour Bridge (1932).

As we continue the walk, we leave Blackwattle Bay behind and enter Rozelle Bay. This sector brings us back to the industrial days of Glebe with the old timber yards being the leading industry in the area at the time. Next we cross Jubilee Park and its historic cricket pavilion, followed by Federal Park and then Bicentennial Park.

The walking sectors of the tour conclude at the Jubilee Park Light Rail Station where we catch the service back to the City. The journey takes approximately 25 minutes with an expected arrival time back at Central Station around 4pm.
